

Genesis 45:1-15, 50:15-21 (NRSV)

Then Joseph could no longer control himself before all those who stood by him, and he cried out, "Send everyone away from me." So no one stayed with him when Joseph made himself known to his brothers.² And he wept so loudly that the Egyptians heard it, and the household of Pharaoh heard it.³ Joseph said to his brothers, "I am Joseph. Is my father still alive?" But his brothers could not answer him, so dismayed were they at his presence.

⁴Then Joseph said to his brothers, "Come closer to me." And they came closer. He said, "I am your brother, Joseph, whom you sold into Egypt."⁵ And now do not be distressed, or angry with yourselves, because you sold me here; for God sent me before you to preserve life.⁶ For the famine has been in the land these two years; and there are five more years in which there will be neither plowing nor harvest.⁷ God sent me before you to preserve for you a remnant on earth, and to keep alive for you many survivors.⁸ So it was not you who sent me here, but God; he has made me a father to Pharaoh, and lord of all his house and ruler over all the land of Egypt.⁹ Hurry and go up to my father and say to him, "Thus says your son Joseph, God has made me lord of all Egypt; come down to me, do not delay."¹⁰ You shall settle in the land of Goshen, and you shall be near me, you and your children and your children's children, as well as your flocks, your herds, and all that you have.¹¹ I will provide for you there—since there are five more years of famine to come—so that you and your household, and all that you have, will not come to poverty.¹² And now your eyes and the eyes of my brother Benjamin see that it is my own mouth that speaks to you.¹³ You must tell my father how greatly I am honored in Egypt, and all that you have seen. Hurry and bring my father down here."¹⁴ Then he fell upon his brother Benjamin's neck and wept, while Benjamin wept upon his neck.¹⁵ And he kissed all his brothers and wept upon them; and after that his brothers talked with him.

[Later, after Jacob's death, the brothers fear that Joseph will now exact his revenge on them.]

¹⁵Realizing that their father was dead, Joseph's brothers said, "What if Joseph still bears a grudge against us and pays us back in full for all the wrong that we did to him?"¹⁶ So they approached Joseph, saying, "Your father gave this instruction before he died,¹⁷ 'Say to Joseph: I beg you, forgive the crime of your brothers and the wrong they did in harming you.' Now therefore please forgive the crime of the servants of the God of your father." Joseph wept when they spoke to him.¹⁸ Then his brothers also wept, fell down before him, and said, "We are here as your slaves."¹⁹ But Joseph said to them, "Do not be afraid! Am I in the place of God?²⁰ Even though you intended to do harm to me, God intended it for good, in order to preserve a numerous people, as he is doing today.²¹ So have no fear; I myself will provide for you and your little ones." In this way he reassured them, speaking kindly to them.

The stuff of a Broadway musical. Joseph's story is filled with tragedy, intrigue, and surprise. Yet, whose story is this really? Who is at work behind the scenes? Twice, Joseph assures his brothers that God has taken their evil acts and reshaped them toward God's good purposes.

Abraham was the father of Isaac, who was the father of Jacob, who was the father of twelve sons, from whom God would grow the twelve tribes of Israel. Joseph was the youngest of Jacob's twelve sons, the long-awaited child of Rachel, Jacob's true love. If you've seen the musical, Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat, you know the basics of the story.

Joseph's life begins with great hope. He has a gift for dreams that reveal much. He is his father's favorite. Jacob gives him a beautiful coat to wear and frees him from the hard work assigned to his eleven brothers. But there is a darkness present as well. Jacob's favoritism and Joseph's dreams create an explosive family situation.

The brothers' envy and anger eventually boil over. They consider killing the boy, who is perhaps seventeen or so. Instead, they sell him to some passing Ishmaelite traders which is nonetheless tantamount to killing him. Indeed, the brothers make up a story about his violent death for their heart-stricken father, even using Joseph's beautiful coat.

Joseph ends up in Egypt, a servant to the captain of Pharaoh's guard, Potiphar. Joseph has to reject the sexual advances of Potiphar's wife, who accuses Joseph of trying to rape her and has him tossed into prison. Joseph's gift for interpreting dreams gets him out of prison and, remarkably, he rises to become chief administrator of Pharaoh's empire.

Joseph's dreams reveal to him that there will soon be a lengthy famine in Egypt. Armed with this foresight, Joseph saves Egypt from starvation. When the famine threatens Canaan, Jacob's sons make their way to Egypt to buy food. There, they stand before Pharaoh's right-hand man . . . Joseph! The brother's don't recognize him, but Joseph sure recognizes them. He accuses them of being spies and says he will sell them grain, but they must bring the missing brother (for they have traveled without Benjamin¹) to show that they have told the truth. Joseph hangs on to Simeon to ensure their return. But, of course, the question is whether they will return? Or will they abandon Simeon as they "abandoned" Joseph?

Though it will become clear that Joseph wants to heal the breach with his brothers, it is understandable that he would set things up so that he can observe his brothers and see what comes of it all. The brothers claim to be "honest" but are they? Have they learned anything since their sale of the young Joseph? Also, by his questions, Joseph is able to learn about the family circumstances.

There are many twists and turns in the story, and Joseph has a lot of trouble keeping control of his emotions through it all. It is a well-told tale and I hope you'll grab a copy of Peterson's The Message and read the whole thing (Genesis 37-50). It might even be a little hard for you to remember that you are reading the Bible!

At last, the truth

The brothers do return to Egypt to buy more grain and, in the end, too overcome with emotion to go on with the deception, Joseph reveals his identity to his brothers. Can you imagine the shock of the brothers when the "prime minister" reveals himself?! Their shock quickly gives way to fear. The brothers have every reason to expect that Joseph will exact revenge for their evil deed, that their family's cycle of treachery and hostility will roll on.

But the brothers do not know what we, the readers, know. God has been with Joseph in all things and Joseph knows it. Upon the births of his own sons, Manasseh and Ephraim,² Joseph said "God has made me forget all my hardship and all my father's house³ . . . For God has made me fruitful in the land of my misfortune" (41:51-52).

And now, with everything out in the open, Jacob's whole family will move down to Egypt, where they will live under the protection of Pharaoh and Joseph.⁴

God's grace and God's work

Joseph's forgiveness of his brothers is God's amazing grace at work in their lives and relationships. It is God who is able to break the cycle of deceit in their family. It is God alone who can enable us to set aside our pride, to overlook the wrongs committed against us. It is God who empowers us to embrace and to forgive, time and again if need be, those in our family we love and those we must learn to love.

And through all these stories of Jacob and his sons, through all the deceit and treachery, God was moving events and people forward toward the covenant that God had made with Abraham, Jacob's grandfather.

So often, our own confidence in God is tested by the difficulties that plague our lives and our world. We wonder where God is in it all. Yet, stories such as Joseph remind us that God is God, able to work all things toward God's good. This doesn't make our evil acts less evil, nor our tragedies less tragic. It just means that God can do what God promises to do.

We affirm with Paul that "all things work together for good for those who love God" (Romans 8:28). How can Paul be so confident? Well, that would again take us to the meaning and implications of Jesus', birth, life, death, and resurrection. All roads lead not to Rome, but to Calvary!

¹Benjamin is the youngest of the brothers and is Joseph's only full brother, having been born to Rachel, Jacob's lifelong love. She died during Benjamin's birth.

²Joseph takes a Egyptian wife. Before his death, Jacob adopts the two sons as his own and Joseph's tribal allotment goes to his sons. Thus, in the lists of tribes, Ephraim and Manasseh are included. The books of the prophets can often be confusing because they frequently use the name of one the tribes to stand in for all Israel. Thus, the prophets will address Dan or Judah or Ephraim, for example, when they are bringing God's word to the people of God.

³Joseph means that he has forgotten the cycles of deceit and envy in which he was raised.

⁴But another shock lies ahead, for the family's descendants become enslaved by later Pharaohs (see Exodus 1).

Providence

“Providence” is one of those old words that we don’t use much anymore. It speaks to the belief that God provides for his people’s needs. Many theological debates swirl around the question of just how God provides for his people. In today’s story, Joseph tells his brothers that what they intended for evil (selling Joseph into slavery!), God intended for good. In other words, God took the brothers’ evil act and ensured that good would come from it, that God’s purposes would be accomplished through it all.

Here is a classical definition of “providence” from the Tyndale Bible Dictionary:

Providence is basically God’s provision for the needs of the [his] people. . . The classic statement is found in Abraham’s confession of faith in his life’s most difficult test. He was under the duress of God’s command to provide something he could not afford—his son in sacrifice. He struggled with the dilemma of losing his son or losing God’s friendship. In answer to Isaac’s question about a sacrifice for God, Abraham exclaimed, “God himself will provide the lamb for the burnt offering, my son” (Gen 22:8, NIV). The word “providence” means literally “to see before,” and therefore by implication to do something about the situation. In this case, there was already upon Mt Moriah a suitable sacrifice, “a ram, caught in a thicket by his horns” (v 13). The unbelieving analysis of that situation would understand only that through an ordinary process an animal had become entangled in dense underbrush, and coincidentally Abraham and Isaac happened to arrive on the scene. But to believing Abraham, who was led for three days toward that one point in time and space in desperate need of a divine provision, it was altogether clear to him that God, by whatever process, had stationed the ram at the place of sacrifice for his use. “Provision” and “providence” are coordinately related to their verbal root, “provide,” and are essentially and etymologically the same. However, they are theologically distinguished in usage by providence’s having come to mean divine provision on the basis of foresight.

The great text on providence in the NT is also set in a context of sacrifice pleasing to God. Paul had reason to commend the Philippians’ sacrificial support of his missionary work. To them he stated his unbounded confidence in the providential care of God: “This same God who takes care of me will supply all your needs from his glorious riches, which have been given to us in Christ Jesus” (Phil 4:19, NLT). The sacrifice of Christ Jesus for us confirms the doctrine of providence with a most reasonable certitude. What God initially required of Abraham but did not ultimately require (the sacrifice of his son), he required of himself and did fulfill two millennia later. It is God’s nature to supply, to foresee man’s need and to provide for him.

Joseph’s statement to his brothers is one of the classic biblical texts on God’s providence. Two others are from Jeremiah and Paul:

- “For surely I know the plans I have for you, says the Lord, plans for your welfare and not for harm, to give you a future with hope” (Jeremiah 29:11). This word is brought to the people as they live in exile following the Babylonian destruction of Jerusalem.
- “We know that all things work together for good for those who love God, who are called according to his purpose” (Romans 8:28).

In none of these passages, are we told exactly how God accomplishes the good his people, but are simply reassured that God is always working, always moving his purposes forward, always seeking and crafting the good of his people.

You wouldn’t think that there would be much left to talk about around a topic like this, yet the most heated debates among evangelical theologians in recent years have been about God and the future. We tend to always say that God knows the future, but is it knowable? Can even God know that which can’t be known? Has God created a cosmos in which randomness and free will constrain even God? What does the Bible say? How much of what we believe about God and the future is more indebted to Plato than to Scripture? But if the future isn’t knowable, how can we really trust that God can do what God says he will do? . . . I think you can see that there is still plenty to talk about!

READING WITH HEART & MIND

Here are some biblical readings on the subject of God’s providence.

Monday, Genesis 22 God provides an animal that is to be sacrificed rather than Isaac.

Tuesday, Jeremiah 29:1-23 This is a letter that Jeremiah sends to the exiles in Babylon.

Wednesday, Psalm 33 One of the classic psalms about God’s greatness and goodness.

Thursday, Matthew 6:25-34 Jesus reassures his disciples that God cares for them

Friday, Philippians 4:10-23 Verse 19 is a classic verse on God’s provision of our needs.

Saturday, Romans 8:18-39 Verse 28 is another verse mentioned in the text box. Here is the whole, memorable passage.

Trip to the Biblical Lands with Scott & Patti Engle: Oct 2009!

In June 2007, Scott & Patti led a St. Andrew group on a life-changing tour of the biblical lands: Israel, Egypt, Ephesus, Athens, Rome and more. They are planning a similar trip in October 2009. As before, it will be built around a 14-day Holland America cruise. In addition to the day tours, there will be a 4-week class before the trip and even lectures at sea to help you get as much out of this once-in-a-lifetime trip as possible.

For more info go to www.thebibleacademy.com

The first information meeting will be at 7pm on Tuesday evening, Aug 26, in Piro Hall.

Growing Up Jesus

A look at the lives, beliefs, and practices of Jews in Jesus' day

A new Something Else series that continues today

What was it like to grow up in Jesus' world? Learning to be better readers of the Bible means learning it to read in full, living color. In the case of the gospels, we need a better handle of what it was like to be a Jew in Jesus' day. In this series, we'll look at a full range of questions that swirl around the lives, beliefs, and practices of first-century Jews. You'll be surprised at how much your understanding of the gospels will be deepened. There will be plenty of surprises along the way!

Questions for Discussion and Reflection

So the brothers sell Joseph into slavery, pocket the money, and convince their father that his beloved son is dead, ripped apart by wild animals. And somehow all this is reshaped by God toward God's good. Joseph tells them this once and then reiterates it:

- "God sent me before you to preserve for you a remnant on earth, and to keep alive for you many survivors. So it was not you who sent me here, but God . . ." (45:5-7).
- "Do not be afraid! Am I in the place of God? Even though you intended to do harm to me, God intended it for good, in order to preserve a numerous people, as he is doing today" (50:19-20).

God sent Joseph to Egypt? God's plans? . . . It makes my head spin. What is Joseph really telling us? Surely God couldn't have caused the brothers to sell Joseph into slavery so that he could save the family from starvation, though I'm sure that some read the story exactly that way. What do you think? One of the great OT scholars Gerhard von Rad wrote:

- "The statement about the brothers' evil plans and God's good plans now opens up the inmost mystery of the Joseph story. It is in every respect, along with the similar passage in 45:5-7, the climax to the whole. Even where no man could imagine it, God had all the strings in his hand. But this guidance of God is only asserted; nothing more explicit is said about the way in which God incorporated man's evil into his saving activity."

The mystery here opens up some of our most fundamental beliefs and assumptions about God and his creation. Does God really hold all the strings in his hands? Doesn't that make us nothing more than marionettes? Where does that leave our free will? And without it, how can we talk about our truly loving God? Perhaps this isn't so much about our plans v. God's plan, but our plans v. God's power. Again, what do you think? This is fruitful ground for discussion!
