

John 21:15–25 (NIV)

<sup>15</sup>When they had finished eating, Jesus said to Simon Peter, “Simon son of John, do you love me more than these?”

“Yes, Lord,” he said, “you know that I love you.”

Jesus said, “Feed my lambs.”

<sup>16</sup>Again Jesus said, “Simon son of John, do you love me?”

He answered, “Yes, Lord, you know that I love you.”

Jesus said, “Take care of my sheep.”

<sup>17</sup>The third time he said to him, “Simon son of John, do you love me?”

Peter was hurt because Jesus asked him the third time, “Do you love me?” He said, “Lord, you know all things; you know that I love you.”

Jesus said, “Feed my sheep. <sup>18</sup>Very truly I tell you, when you were younger you dressed yourself and went where you wanted; but when you are old you will stretch out your hands, and someone else will dress you and lead you where you do not want to go.” <sup>19</sup>Jesus said this to indicate the kind of death by which Peter would glorify God. Then he said to him, “Follow me!”

<sup>20</sup>Peter turned and saw that the disciple whom Jesus loved was following them. (This was the one who had leaned back against Jesus at the supper and had said, “Lord, who is going to betray you?”) <sup>21</sup>When Peter saw him, he asked, “Lord, what about him?”

<sup>22</sup>Jesus answered, “If I want him to remain alive until I return, what is that to you? You must follow me.” <sup>23</sup>Because of this, the rumor spread among the believers that this disciple would not die. But Jesus did not say that he would not die; he only said, “If I want him to remain alive until I return, what is that to you?”

<sup>24</sup>This is the disciple who testifies to these things and who wrote them down. We know that his testimony is true.

<sup>25</sup>Jesus did many other things as well. If every one of them were written down, I suppose that even the whole world would not have room for the books that would be written.

1 Corinthians 15, portions of verses 35–58 (NIV, except v. 44, which is from the Jerusalem Bible)

<sup>35</sup>But someone will ask, “How are the dead raised? With what kind of body will they come?” <sup>36</sup>How foolish! What you sow does not come to life unless it dies. . . . <sup>42</sup>So will it be with the resurrection of the dead. The body that is sown is perishable, it is raised imperishable; <sup>43</sup>it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power. [<sup>44</sup>When it is sown it embodies the soul. When it is raised it embodies the spirit. If the soul has its own embodiment, so does the spirit have its own embodiment.].

<sup>51</sup>Listen, I tell you a mystery: We will not all sleep, but we will all be changed—<sup>52</sup>in a flash, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet. For the trumpet will sound, the dead will be raised imperishable, and we will be changed. <sup>53</sup>For the perishable must clothe itself with the imperishable, and the mortal with immortality. <sup>54</sup>When the perishable has been clothed with the imperishable, and the mortal with immortality, then the saying that is written will come true: “Death has been swallowed up in victory.”

Where, O death, is your sting?”

<sup>56</sup>The sting of death is sin, and the power of sin is the law. <sup>57</sup>But thanks be to God! He gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

<sup>58</sup>Therefore, my dear brothers and sisters, stand firm. Let nothing move you. Always give yourselves fully to the work of the Lord, because you know that your labor in the Lord is not in vain.

Again we say . . . Alleluia, Christ is risen!

Three times Peter has denied Jesus in the early morning hours before the crucifixion. First to a servant girl. Then to a small group huddled around a fire. Then to a servant of the high priest. “Aren’t you one this man’s disciples,” they asked him. “No, I am not,” he replied. His denials are understandable; he is scared, as simple as that. But how those three moments must have haunted him in the days afterward. To deny Jesus, the one you had come to know as Messiah and Lord. Just try to imagine yourself as Peter. Would the despair not have been overwhelming?

And then the resurrection. Jesus lives! Alleluia! But the memory of Peter's denial lives too. Perhaps nothing had been said between the two of them until the breakfast John describes. But now, as they finish their meal on the shore of the Sea of Galilee, Jesus turns to Peter and asks him, "Do you love me?" Not once, not twice, but three times. Peter gets it. He must. Three times, "Do you love me." Each time, Peter replies, "Lord, you know that I love you." Does Jesus know this to be true? Does Peter mean it, truly now, for better and for worse?

Each of Peter's professions of love is met by Jesus with a similar command: "Feed my lambs . . . take care of my sheep . . . feed my sheep." Professing love is one thing; doing love is another. True love is grounded in doing, not saying. Thus, Peter is pledging not merely his love, he is pledging his life to Jesus. It is the life of "serving one another humbly in love," to use a phrase from Paul (Gal. 5:13), that will be the evidence of Peter's love of Jesus.

Jesus warns Peter too. The road ahead will be difficult and, for Peter, will end in a martyr's death. Then, Jesus closes this exchange with a simple, "Follow me," ending where Jesus began (John 1:39,43). In truth, though, it is far from simple. Every single bit of Peter is to be committed to the love and life he has pledged to Jesus. Nothing can be held back.

John closes his gospel by clearing up one mistaken rumor about himself, that Jesus said John would never die, and then reminds the reader that his lengthy testimony of over 15,000 words is still only a tiny portion of what he could have passed on to us. If he tried to say everything that could be said about Jesus all the libraries on the planet couldn't hold the writings. A bit hyperbolic, but we get the point. And it is an important point for us to remember. Most of what Jesus said and did is not in the four gospels. Each of the gospel writers paints their own complementary portrait of Jesus, portraits that are true – truly true.

True truth

So, we have finished John's story, a story he tells so that we might know that this man, Jesus of Nazareth, is the Messiah and the Son of God. John believes that by placing our faith in Jesus, we will have life -- true, full, everlasting life -- in his name.

But that isn't all John and his fellow New Testament writers want us to believe to be true, i.e., to reflect genuine reality. Not merely "true for you" or "true for me" but truly true. They offer us what they proclaim to be the true truth about Jesus.

One piece of this true truth that the apostles proclaim seems particularly odd and strange to us. Yet, there it is in the most basic and oldest of all the Christian creeds: we believe in the "the resurrection of the body." This is not about Jesus' resurrection, which we affirmed earlier in the Apostles Creed, it is about our own bodies. As Jesus was raised so shall we all be raised. Paul puts it this way in his letter to the Romans, "If the Spirit of him who raised Jesus from the dead dwells in you, he who raised Christ from the dead will give life to your mortal bodies also through his Spirit that dwells in you" (Rom. 8:11).

The Jews of Jesus' day believed that when the Last Days arrived, all the dead would be resurrected. Paul is agreeing with that. Jesus is the first and the rest of us will follow; there just happens to be 2,000 years, so far, between the first person to be resurrected, Jesus, and the rest of the us. To use Paul's agricultural metaphor of Jesus as the "first fruits," God's harvest is underway, it just seems to be taking a long time, by our measure of time at least.

If this all seems just a bit too fantastical and even weird to you, consider our affirmation of Jesus' resurrection. That doesn't seem so fantastical only because we've gotten used to the idea. But once you've accepted as true the claim that Jesus was resurrected and walked out of the tomb after having died . . . well, then everything is on the table. Being a Christian actually takes a big imagination, a mind and heart that refuses to try and shrink God and his creation into a small box that seems "reasonable" to us.

Our belief in the resurrection of the body is the promise that I will one day again see my grandfather – solid, material, tactile, real. What sort of bodies will my Granddad and I have? Most of the questions I have the Bible doesn't answer. Will he have hair? Will I? Beats me. Paul can't answer such questions and considers them even a bit beside the point. In 1 Corinthians 15:35-58, he lays out what he does know about our resurrection bodies. I hope you'll take the time to read the whole passage and to read the text box below about the translation of verse 44.

What I do know to be true truth, is that what is true of Jesus' resurrection will be true of my Granddad and of me. So, at least I know the answer to the most important question: I will see my grandfather again, I will know my grandfather, and I will hug him. We will talk and we will laugh and we will live basking in the love of God and the light of Christ. Perhaps, we will even talk some baseball. That is good news indeed.

Translating Verse 44 in 1 Corinthians 15

Whenever readers come to 1 Cor. 15, they are nearly always confused by, and often misled by, the regrettable translation of v. 44: "It [our body] is sown a physical body, it is raised a spiritual body. If there is a physical body, there is also a spiritual body" (NRSV). Understandably, we assume that Paul is contrasting our current physical, (i.e., material) body, with a resurrected spiritual, (i.e., non-material) body. This is how we are used to understanding words like "physical" and "spiritual." But this translation leads us to exactly the wrong conclusion about Paul's meaning. Indeed, it is the very mistake that the Corinthians have made and Paul is trying to correct!

Richard Hays at Duke Seminary is widely recognized as one of the foremost Pauline scholars of our day. In the following passage from his 1 Corinthians commentary in the Interpretation series, he helps us to see what Paul is actually saying in the Greek about our resurrected bodies. He writes:

Whereas our present bodies are "sown" (in this life) perishable, dishonorable, and weak, the resurrection body will be raised (in the next life) imperishable, glorious, and powerful (vv. 42-43). Paul thus produces an impressive piece of visionary preaching, extolling the glories that await us. He is seeking to make the resurrection of the dead seem appealing rather than appalling to the Corinthians.

Yet the last item in this sequence is the one that he is driving toward: "It is sown a natural body [psychikon sōma], it is raised a spiritual body [pneumatikon sōma]" (v. 44, NIV). This is the nub of his argument. This last contrast, however, presents a vexing problem for translators (cf. 2:14, where the same contrast occurs). The phrase psychikon sōma is notoriously difficult to translate into English. The NRSV's translation ("physical body") is especially unfortunate, for it reinstates precisely the dualistic dichotomy between physical and spiritual that Paul is struggling to overcome. In any case, psychikon certainly does not mean "physical." Furthermore, although pneumatikon sōma is easier to translate, "spiritual body" sounds like an oxymoron. What sense are we to make of this?

By far the most graceful translation of verse 44, and the one that best conveys the meaning of Paul's sentence, is found in the Jerusalem Bible: "When it is sown it embodies the soul, when it is raised it embodies the spirit. If the soul has its own embodiment, so does the spirit have its own embodiment." That is Paul's point: our mortal bodies embody the psychē ("soul"), the animating force of our present existence, but the resurrection body will embody the divinely given pneuma ("spirit"). It is to be a "spiritual body" not in the sense that it is somehow made out of spirit and vapors, but in the sense that it is determined by the spirit and gives the spirit form and local habitation.

All of this is a bit hard to follow in translation, but the drift of Paul's argument is clear in the Greek, where his use of psychikon in verse 44 is explained by the key reference to psychē in the story of the creation of Adam (v. 45). Paul's use of the difficult term psychikon sōma is determined by the fact that he wants to cite Genesis 2:7 (LXX) in support of his position: "The first man, Adam, as scripture says, became a living soul [psychē]; but the last Adam has become a life-giving Spirit" (v. 45, JB). The psychē is linked with Adam, the initiator of decay and death, but Christ, by his resurrection, becomes "life-giving Spirit" (cf. v. 22), the initiator of a new order of humanity. The body associated with Adam (which Paul therefore calls psychikon) is mortal and bound to the earth from which it came; on the other hand, the body associated with the risen Christ (which Paul therefore calls pneumatikon) will be immortal and stamped by the image of "the man of heaven" (vv. 48-49). . . . A similar point is made somewhat more clearly in Philippians 3:20-21:

But our citizenship is in heaven. And we eagerly await a Savior from there, the Lord Jesus Christ, who, by the power that enables him to bring everything under his control [cf. 1 Cor. 15:23-28], will transform our lowly bodies so that they will be like his glorious body.

(Phil. 3:20-21, author's translation)

Questions for Discussion and Reflection

1. As Jesus begins to talk privately with Peter, we can be sure that Peter's recent three-fold denial of Jesus (John 18:15-27) is ringing in his ears and heart.
  - a. Why do you think Jesus asks Peter three times whether Peter loves him? What more could there be beside the symmetry with Peter's three-fold denial?
  - b. What does Jesus say in response to Peter's profession of love? What does he want from Peter?
2. After talking with Peter, Jesus turns to the beloved disciple, who is, in all likelihood, John, the gospel writer. Jesus has spoken about Peter's future, telling him that he will be martyred. Peter asks to know something of John's future. It is a very natural question. In response, Jesus tells Peter that he must simply follow Jesus.
  - a. What do you think that Jesus asks of you? Do you ever feel inadequate to the task? Have you even thought about it very much?
  - b. How much of a difference would it make in our discipleship if we really believed that when God calls us to a task he has gotten it right, that we are the right person then and there?
  - c. How can we get better at hearing and understanding God's call?
3. John tells us that everything he didn't tell us could fill all the libraries in the world. What would you most like to know about Jesus that John doesn't tell us?
4. The accompanying resurrection text for this week is drawn from 1 Corinthians 15:35-58. Paul wants to address the question of what sort of body we will have when we are resurrected. As the Weekly Bible Study for this week strives to make clear, the NIV translators don't help us in v. 44, by contrasting "natural body" with a "spiritual body." Paul's point is that the mortal body embodies the "soul," which is the animating force or our present existence. Our resurrected bodies will embody the divinely given "spirit."
  - a. Knowing that God is good, how can we come to see the full joy of our own bodily resurrection?
  - b. Nearly all of us have lost loved ones. Who would you most like to hug again?

Scott Engle's Weekday Bible Classes

Join us whenever you can. Each week's lesson stands in its own.

This is very "drop-in." Bring something to eat if you like. Bring a study Bible.

On occasion Scott has to cancel class, so if you are coming for the first time, you can check www.scottengle.org to make sure the class is meeting.

Tuesday Lunchtime Class – now studying the Gospel of John

We meet from 11:45 to 1:00 in room 127 on Tuesdays.

Monday Evening Class – now studying Paul and the Galatians

We meet from 7:00 to 8:15 in Piro Hall on Monday evenings.

This class will begin an in-depth of Revelation on June 11.
