Exodus 12:1–13 (NIV)

The LORD said to Moses and Aaron in Egypt, <sup>2</sup> “This month is to be for you the first month, the first month of your year. <sup>3</sup> Tell the whole community of Israel that on the tenth day of this month each man is to take a lamb for his family, one for each household. <sup>4</sup> If any household is too small for a whole lamb, they must share one with their nearest neighbor, having taken into account the number of people there are. You are to determine the amount of lamb needed in accordance with what each person will eat. <sup>5</sup> The animals you choose must be year-old males without defect, and you may take them from the sheep or the goats. <sup>6</sup> Take care of them until the fourteenth day of the month, when all the members of the community of Israel must slaughter them at twilight. <sup>7</sup> Then they are to take some of the blood and put it on the sides and tops of the doorframes of the houses where they eat the lambs. <sup>8</sup> That same night they are to eat the meat roasted over the fire, along with bitter herbs, and bread made without yeast. <sup>9</sup> Do not eat the meat raw or boiled in water, but roast it over a fire—with the head, legs and internal organs. <sup>10</sup> Do not leave any of it till morning; if some is left till morning, you must burn it. <sup>11</sup> This is how you are to eat it: with your cloak tucked into your belt, your sandals on your feet and your staff in your hand. Eat it in haste; it is the LORD’s Passover.

<sup>12</sup> “On that same night I will pass through Egypt and strike down every firstborn of both people and animals, and I will bring judgment on all the gods of Egypt. I am the LORD. <sup>13</sup> The blood will be a sign for you on the houses where you are, and when I see the blood, I will pass over you. No destructive plague will touch you when I strike Egypt.

<sup>7</sup> Then came the day of Unleavened Bread on which the Passover lamb had to be sacrificed. <sup>8</sup> Jesus sent Peter and John, saying, “Go and make preparations for us to eat the Passover.”

<sup>9</sup> “Where do you want us to prepare for it?” they asked.

<sup>10</sup> He replied, “As you enter the city, a man carrying a jar of water will meet you. Follow him to the house that he enters, <sup>11</sup> and say to the owner of the house, ‘The Teacher asks: Where is the guest room, where I may eat the Passover with my disciples?’ <sup>12</sup> He will show you a large room upstairs, all furnished. Make preparations there.”

<sup>14</sup> When the hour came, Jesus and his apostles reclined at the table. <sup>15</sup> And he said to them, “I have eagerly desired to eat this Passover with you before I suffer. <sup>16</sup> For I tell you, I will not eat it again until it finds fulfillment in the kingdom of God.”

<sup>17</sup> After taking the cup, he gave thanks and said, “Take this and divide it among you. <sup>18</sup> For I tell you I will not drink again from the fruit of the vine until the kingdom of God comes.”

<sup>19</sup> And he took bread, gave thanks and broke it, and gave it to them, saying, “This is my body given for you; do this in remembrance of me.”

<sup>20</sup> In the same way, after the supper he took the cup, saying, “This cup is the new covenant in my blood, which is poured out for you. <sup>21</sup> But the hand of him who is going to betray me is with mine on the table. <sup>22</sup> The Son of Man will go as it has been decreed. But woe to that man who betrays him!” <sup>23</sup> They began to question among themselves which of them it might be who would do this.

1 Corinthians 11:23–34 (NIV)

<sup>23</sup> For I received from the Lord what I also passed on to you: The Lord Jesus, on the night he was betrayed, took bread, <sup>24</sup> and when he had given thanks, he broke it and said, “This is my body, which is for you; do this in remembrance of me.” <sup>25</sup> In the same way, after supper he took the cup, saying, “This cup is the new covenant in my blood; do this, whenever you drink it, in remembrance of me.” <sup>26</sup> For whenever you eat this bread and drink this cup, you proclaim the Lord’s death until he comes.

<sup>27</sup> So then, whoever eats the bread or drinks the cup of the Lord in an unworthy manner will be guilty of sinning against the body and blood of the Lord. <sup>28</sup> Everyone ought to examine themselves before they eat of the bread and drink from the cup. <sup>29</sup> For those who eat and drink without discerning the body of Christ eat and drink judgment on themselves. <sup>30</sup> That is why many among you are weak and sick, and a number of you have fallen asleep. <sup>31</sup> But if we were more discerning with regard to ourselves, we would not come under such judgment. <sup>32</sup> Nevertheless, when we are judged in this way by the Lord, we are being disciplined so that we will not be finally condemned with the world.

<sup>33</sup> So then, my brothers and sisters, when you gather to eat, you should all eat together. <sup>34</sup> Anyone who is hungry should eat something at home, so that when you meet together it may not result in judgment.

And when I come I will give further directions.

The true story

And so it comes to this. It was always going to come to this. For God so loved the world that he was willing to give his only Son over to the darkness of this world, so that we could be saved through the Son's faithfulness, all the way to death, even death on a cross. In a word . . . it was inevitable, ever since the rebellion of the humans against their Creator. So Jesus will lead a new Exodus, freedom not from slavery to pharaoh, but slavery to sin and darkness. Jesus would be the sacrificial lamb at this freedom party. This meal, this last meal, is still shared by Jesus' disciples the world over.

I'm often asked what heaven is like. My response is to suggest that the person look back to the very best moments or times of their life and then consider that being with Christ will be immeasurably more wonderful than even those good times. For me, as for many, those "best times" are wrapped around the people we love. In the Engle family, it is sitting around a table, everybody talking, eating, a bottle of wine open on the table – always good, but on occasion, something very special. In the fellowship and in the feasting, we are bound together, time stops, and our problems and anxieties fade away. Just think how often we choose to mark special occasions with a meal, a special meal, a meal that transcends mere nourishment, or even culinary pleasure. A meal that binds and makes us one – even if only for a brief while.

Knowing all this, it doesn't surprise me that feasts play such a large in the life of God's people. From Genesis to Revelation, feasts of one sort or another figure large in our life with God. They define us and shape us. And they begin with a ritual meal in the early spring that is called Passover. Here is the story of that meal.

The Exodus

When the book of Exodus opens, Abraham's descendants (through Isaac, Jacob, and Jacob's twelve sons) have been enslaved in Egypt for several hundred years. Sometime around 1500–1300 BC, Moses is born and then raised in the Pharaoh's house. As a grown man, he murders an Egyptian who was beating a fellow Hebrew, and disappears into the desert. There, he marries and tends to his flocks.

One day, he sees a bush that is burning but is not consumed by the fire. When he investigates, Moses is confronted by God, who tells Moses that God is going to save the Hebrews. It is in this meeting that God reveals his name to Moses, YHWH, which means "I am" or "I am who I am" (Exodus 3:1-6).

Moses resists and offers up some reasons why he isn't the right guy, but God persists. Eventually, Moses, with the help of his brother, returns to Egypt to confront the Pharaoh and demand freedom for the Hebrews. As you'd expect, the Pharaoh resists, so God sends plague after plague upon Egypt. In the end, Pharaoh relents only when God sends death to strike all the first-born of Egypt. However, the death passes over the homes of the Hebrews who have marked their doorways with the blood of a lamb.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup>Jews commemorate this "passing over" every spring. In the last week before his crucifixion, Jesus arrived in Jerusalem for the Passover celebration. The last supper of Jesus and his disciples was a Passover dinner;

After this final plague, Pharaoh lets the Hebrews go, but then changes his mind and chases after them. God parts the Red Sea (or “sea of reeds”) to let the Hebrews pass, but the Egyptian army is drowned when they follow the Hebrews into the parted waters.

The feast of Passover

In their commentary on the Passover, Ryken and Hughes share some valuable insights:

To make sure that his people would never forget their salvation, God gave them a special memory aid: Passover, or the Feast of Unleavened Bread. This feast was meant to be an annual celebration. . . .

The Israelites celebrated their first Passover in Egypt. They continued to celebrate it during the forty years they spent wandering in the wilderness (Num. 9:1–5). Once they entered the Promised Land, they still kept the feast, for God said, “When you enter the land that the LORD will give you as he promised, observe this ceremony” (Exod. 12:25). No sooner had Joshua led the Israelites across the Jordan than they celebrated Passover in their new homeland (Josh. 5:10, 11).

Passover was an annual reminder of God’s saving grace, in which Israel’s deliverance from Egypt was commemorated and celebrated. The Exodus was not repeated, of course, but it was symbolically reenacted with blood and with bread. The feast that God’s people shared was something they could see, taste, touch, and smell. By reliving their escape from Egypt, they preserved the message of salvation in their collective memory. Passover was given so that future generations would know the salvation of their God.

In Exodus 12 the instructions for Passover are given twice, separated by instructions for the Feast of Unleavened Bread. Verses 1–13 concern the selection and slaughter of a perfect lamb. Once the lamb was slain, its blood was spread on the doorpost. The blood was a sign that a sacrifice had been made for sin, and thus it protected Israel’s firstborn sons from the angel of death. Finally, the lamb was roasted and eaten, together with bitter herbs and bread without yeast.<sup>2</sup>

The New Covenant

But the story of the Passover feast does not end there. Though the Israelites cherished God’s law and kept the stone tablets in the Ark of the Covenant, they proved unable to live as God had taught them. They proved unable to live in right relationship, truly loving God and loving neighbor.

Nonetheless, God, through the prophet Jeremiah, promised his people that the day would come when his law, his instruction to them, would no longer be written on the tablets of stone given to Moses, but on the very hearts of his people. God’s people would no longer even have to teach other about God, for they would all know God (Jeremiah 31:33–34). God would forgive their wickedness and not even remember their sin. This would be God’s new covenant with his people.

Which brings us to Jesus. Symbols can be emotionally powerful, sometimes enormously so. In his ministry, Jesus’ actions were often powerfully symbolic. He ate with the oppressed and despised to demonstrate that all persons were welcome in the coming of God’s kingdom. He healed the sick to demonstrate that in God’s kingdom the lame would walk and the blind would see. When Jesus came to Jerusalem for Passover Festival in the days before his death, he went to the temple overturning tables and invoking, in words and action, Jeremiah’s judgment on the temple system. In sharing the Passover meal with his disciples, Jesus would reshape cherished Jewish symbols and hopes, applying them to himself and his ministry.

Jesus is the Passover lamb, essentially inaugurating a new Exodus. Jesus is the one whose sacrificial death makes our own salvation possible.

Jesus had come to Jerusalem a few days before, entering the city as a returning king, to waving palms and chanting crowds. Because of the large crowds in Jerusalem<sup>3</sup> for festival, Jesus and his disciple had stayed in Bethany, a “suburb.” Now, after sundown on Thursday, the evening of his arrest and trial, Jesus gathered his disciples together so they could share the Passover meal within the city walls.

The Passover meal was eaten by a family. On that early spring evening in Jerusalem, Jesus and the twelve disciples make up the family. The head of the household would offer thanks for the “bread of affliction,”<sup>4</sup> (Deuteronomy 16:3). Now, Jesus identifies the bread with himself – with his suffering for his disciples. The Passover lamb was the seal of the covenant between God and his people, a covenant that had been written on tablets of stone. Now, Jesus reminds his disciples of the new covenant, to be written on hearts, which had been promised centuries before in the scroll of Jeremiah. Jesus is the “mediator of a better covenant . . . enacted through better promises” (Hebrew 8:6), a covenant sealed with Jesus’ own blood. Is it any wonder that early Christians came to embrace the sacredness of the Lord’s Supper?

And so we share this feast of the new covenant, this reshaping of the Passover meal around our Lord. As John the Baptist exclaimed, “Behold! The lamb of God that takes away the sin of the world” (John 1:29).

The tradition begins

The earliest record of the communion meal is not from the gospels, rather, it is Paul’s first letter to the Corinthians, written in AD 53 or so, a decade before Mark. There are lots of problems with the communion meal in Corinth; for one, the rich are eating all their food in private and leaving little for the poorer among them. Paul seeks to help them understand the meaning of this holy meal. Richard Hays writes:

Thus, in Paul’s rendering of the tradition, two closely linked themes stand out: the sharing of the Supper calls the community to think of Jesus’ death for others, and that death is understood to initiate a new covenant (v. 25; cf. Jer. 31:31–34). To be in covenant relation with God is to belong to a covenant people bound together by responsibilities to God and to one another; the character of this new covenant should be shown forth in the sharing of the meal. The trouble with the Corinthians is that they are celebrating the Supper in a way that disregards this structure of covenant obligations and demonstrates an odd amnesia about Jesus’ death. By showing contempt for those who have nothing, they are acting as though his death had not decisively changed the conditions of their relationship to one another.<sup>5</sup>

We are people of this new covenant. God has put within us a new heart and a new Spirit (Jeremiah 31:33; Ezekiel 36:26). We may not always feel this way or act like it, but we are not alone. God is with us. Jesus has ushered in the new covenant foreseen centuries before by Jeremiah.

The community of New Covenant people

Who are we? We are people of this new covenant. We, those who make up the body of Christ, are a covenantal community, bound by covenant to God and to one another. In Paul’s words, we have all been reconciled . . . as one body . . . to God by the cross and God is building us into a place where God lives through the Spirit (Ephesians 2:16, 22).

This “people-oriented” agreement God has made with us means that, as Bishop N. T. Wright writes, “it is as impossible, unnecessary, and undesirable to be a Christian all by yourself as it is to be a newborn baby all by yourself,” for all those who have faith in <sup>3</sup> The population of Jerusalem was about 60,000 in Jesus’ day, but could swell to nearly 200,000 during major festivals.

<sup>4</sup> God instructed the Israelites to use unleavened bread at Passover to remind them of their hasty departure from Egypt. Unleavened bread is bread made without yeast. It takes time for yeast to do its magic, making the bread rise.

Christ are born anew, new creations born into God's creation, the Church. As another wise and informed Christian, whose name escapes me, wrote, "There is no healthy relationship with Jesus without a relationship to the Church." To put it another way, we can't expect to have a healthy relationship with Jesus without a relationship with his Body. And to put a finer edge on the theology, all believers are part of the Body of Christ, whether they are present or absent.

You see, we humans are built for relationship, for community. We are made in the image of God, who, in his very being, is inherently relational, an eternal loving fellowship of three persons: Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. Thus, it is in covenantal community with one another, believer to believer, that we discover the best within us and learn what it really means to be God's people.

The bridge across our differences

Christians are all over the place when it comes to Holy Communion. We all (or at least, most) affirm that it is breathtakingly significant. But ask "what is really happening?" and you'll get a lot of answers. Scripture doesn't help much here. What exactly did Jesus mean when he said, "This is my body . . . this is my blood?" or "Do this in remembrance of me." The disciples were perplexed and so are we.

In keeping with John Wesley, Methodists are theologians of the middle. We are a bridging church. This reflects our roots in the Church of England, which, during the Protestant reformation, sought to hold together those who wanted to stay with Rome and those who sought a return to "primitive" Christianity (the Puritans, for example). We see this Methodist (and Anglican) commitment to finding the middle way, the via media, in many areas of Christian doctrine and practice, including our understanding of Holy Communion.<sup>6</sup> Since we are searching for the middle way, let's look at the two extremes.

Rome and Zwingli

In the text box below, I've summarized the Roman Catholic view of Communion, namely, that by consecrating the elements (the bread and wine), they become the body and blood of Christ. For a Catholic, when Jesus said, "This is my body," he meant just that. But many Protestant reformers challenged that understanding. One, Huldrych Zwingli, held that the Lord's Supper is merely a symbolic meal, a recalling or memorial of the Last Supper. Remembrance, then, becomes no more than recollection. Many Baptist and similar denominations hold this Zwinglian view.

You can see how these differing views would lead to very different practices. Daily Mass by Roman Catholics is understandable since they believe the Mass makes Christ physically present. Likewise, if Communion is no more than a symbolic recalling, then one might practice Communion infrequently.

The Real Presence of Christ

In our striving to find the middle way, United Methodists embrace that Jesus Christ is really present at Communion, in a way that he is not otherwise, but we do not try to explain exactly how we experience Christ's presence. We hold that "in remembrance" is far more than a symbolic recalling of Jesus' death; it is the dynamic re-presentation of the living Christ. This is from "This Holy Mystery," a UMC paper on Communion:

"United Methodists, along with other Christian traditions, have tried to provide clear and faithful interpretations of Christ's presence in the Holy Meal. Our tradition asserts the real, personal, living presence of Jesus Christ. For United Methodists, the Lord's Supper is anchored in the life of the historical Jesus of Nazareth, but is not primarily a remembrance or memorial. We do not embrace the medieval doctrine of transubstantiation, though we do believe that the elements are essential tangible means through which God works. We understand the divine presence in temporal and relational terms. In the Holy Meal of the church, the past, present, and future of the living Christ come together by the power of the Holy Spirit so that we may receive and embody Jesus Christ as God's saving gift for the whole world." [Underlining added]

<sup>6</sup>This is way too big a topic for this short study. For more, you might read "This Holy Mystery: A UMC Understanding of Holy Communion," which was adopted by the General Conference in 2004. It is available at www.umcdiscipleship.org/resources/this-holy-mystery-a-united-methodist-understanding-of-holy-communion1.

Past, present, and future

When we come to the Lord's table, we are stepping out of our own time and into God's time. The past and the future come rushing to meet us. Think of it as living on heaven's clock. The Jews grasped this. Each year at Passover, the father would gather the family together over the Passover meal, saying "This is the night when our God, the Holy One, blessed be he, came down to Egypt and rescued us from the Egyptians . . ." Of course, it wasn't the night – at least not as we reckon time. But it was the night in God's time. The family was one with their ancestors during that meal. They were the same family being rescued in an eternal act of salvation.

In the same way, when we come forward to partake of Holy Communion, we are with Christ, with the disciples, and with all the people of God. God's future, his victory over sin and death, comes rushing to meet us over the Lord's table. It all takes a lot of imagination doesn't it. And it takes all of us, at one table, as one family. Truly, we are all one in Christ Jesus!

Transubstantiation

There's a mouthful. Many protestants think Roman Catholics believe that at Communion, the bread and wine are magically changed into the body and blood of Christ. This seems like nonsense, since the bread and wine still look and taste like bread and wine. Perhaps this will help.

This Roman Catholic doctrine is grounded in Aristotle's understanding of reality, as worked out by Thomas Aquinas and others.

Aristotle held that every object consists of accidents and substance. The object's accidents are all of its physical properties, everything that can be perceived by our senses. Its substance is its essence. For example, the accidents of this piece of paper you are holding are its color, size, texture, shape, smell and so on – everything that makes it paper so far as you can tell. But for Aristotle, its essence, its underlying "paper-ness" is something different; it is its substance. In other words, the piece of paper's substance is separate from the paper's physical properties.

Aquinas and others applied Aristotle's view of reality to the bread and wine of communion. The doctrine of transubstantiation ("conversion in substance") holds that when the bread and wine are blessed, their accidents remain as they were. They still look and taste like bread and wine. But . . . the substance of the bread and wine is converted from "bread-ness" and "wine-ness" to "Christ-ness." They may taste like bread and wine but the underlying reality is that they have become the body and blood of Christ. Thus, Roman Catholics claim the actual physical presence of Christ at Communion.

Monday Afternoon Class

Current study: Isaiah

We continue our study of Isaiah.

Meeting on-line at 3pm Monday on Scott's Facebook page. Search for "Scott Engle - St. Andrew UMC."

Tuesday Lunchtime Class

Current study: John's Gospel

Meeting at 12:00 noon Tuesday in person in Piro Hall and on-line on Scott's Facebook ministry page. Search for "Scott Engle - St. Andrew UMC".

About the weekday classes:

Join us whenever you can. Each week's lesson stands on its own. This is very "drop-in." Both classes are recorded and are available each week in my podcast at scottengle.podbean.com. They are also available on Apple podcasts and elsewhere. Search by "Scott Engle Bible Studies".

Scott's Sunday Class

Meeting on Sunday at 11:00 in Smith Worship Center and on Scott's Facebook page. Search for "Scott Engle - St. Andrew UMC."

We are on a journey through the biblical story, God-Is. Each week, we will follow the sermon at 9:30 and dig a little deeper into the Scriptures for that week.

Videos of all three classes are posted on Scott's YouTube channel. Search for "Scott Engle." These videos are posted as soon as possible after class.
