Revelation 1:9–18 (NIV)

<sup>9</sup>I, John, your brother and companion in the suffering and kingdom and patient endurance that are ours in Jesus, was on the island of Patmos because of the word of God and the testimony of Jesus. <sup>10</sup>On the Lord's Day I was in the Spirit, and I heard behind me a loud voice like a trumpet, <sup>11</sup>which said: "Write on a scroll what you see and send it to the seven churches: to Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamum, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia and Laodicea."

<sup>12</sup>I turned around to see the voice that was speaking to me. And when I turned I saw seven golden lampstands, <sup>13</sup>and among the lampstands was someone like a son of man, dressed in a robe reaching down to his feet and with a golden sash around his chest. <sup>14</sup>The hair on his head was white like wool, as white as snow, and his eyes were like blazing fire. <sup>15</sup>His feet were like bronze glowing in a furnace, and his voice was like the sound of rushing waters. <sup>16</sup>In his right hand he held seven stars, and coming out of his mouth was a sharp, double-edged sword. His face was like the sun shining in all its brilliance.

<sup>17</sup>When I saw him, I fell at his feet as though dead. Then he placed his right hand on me and said: "Do not be afraid. I am the First and the Last. <sup>18</sup>I am the Living One; I was dead, and now look, I am alive for ever and ever! And I hold the keys of death and Hades.

Revelation 3:7–13 (NIV)

These are the words of him who is holy and true, who holds the key of David. What he opens no one can shut, and what he shuts no one can open. <sup>8</sup>I know your deeds. See, I have placed before you an open door that no one can shut. I know that you have little strength, yet you have kept my word and have not denied my name. <sup>9</sup>I will make those who are of the synagogue of Satan, who claim to be Jews though they are not, but are liars—I will make them come and fall down at your feet and acknowledge that I have loved you. <sup>10</sup>Since you have kept my command to endure patiently, I will also keep you from the hour of trial that is going to come on the whole world to test the inhabitants of the earth.

<sup>11</sup>I am coming soon. Hold on to what you have, so that no one will take your crown. <sup>12</sup>The one who is victorious I will make a pillar in the temple of my God. Never again will they leave it. I will write on them the name of my God and the name of the city of my God, the new Jerusalem, which is coming down out of heaven from my God; and I will also write on them my new name. <sup>13</sup>Whoever has ears, let them hear what the Spirit says to the churches.

Revelation. A journey of the imagination to the heart of faith.

Uvalde. Buffalo. Mariupol. . . . It seems as if the darkness deepens, that evil stalks the planet, thrashing around like a caged beast. The families and victims of such horrors have been the audience of the writer of Revelation for nearly two millennia. That's the shame of turning Revelation into some sort of movie script, or thinking that Revelation is trying to scare us into loving Jesus. No . . . Revelation was written to encourage and comfort powerless Christians who were being persecuted, jailed, and even killed for their faith. That's the Revelation I hope to help you discover.

This mystifying and often troubling book seems endlessly fascinating to many. Perhaps a few are bored by John's apocalypse but, if so, I haven't met them. Instead, most of the adult Christians I've met would like to understand why such a strange book is in the Bible and, at best, hear a word or message that will have abiding meaning for them.

Right at the beginning, I ask that you strive to shed any preconceived notions you have about the book, including what you saw on the Discovery channel or read in one of the Left Behind installments. Instead, try to come as if you were reading Revelation for the first time. Of course, that may be exactly the case for many of us. You'll really need only two things: a Bible (NRSV or NIV 2011, preferably) and your imagination. You're going to need to think cosmically and allow God to open new vistas for you through the presentations of John's vision. Revelation, more than any other book of the Bible, is written to speak to your imagination, so be prepared to use it.

Coming to grips with John's Revelation

My own experience is similar to that of many, I'm sure. For most of my life, Revelation was this mysterious book at the back of my Bible. Once in a while, my interest would be aroused by some of the endless fascination with the end times that floats around the fringes of the church. Back in the 70's, I read Hal Lindsey's The Late Great Planet Earth in its first edition, which was fun but seemed farfetched. I even took a class on Revelation from the Moody Bible Institute. I can't say I remember anything from it. In all, Revelation was about as disconnected from my Christian faith as my copy of Business Week. Revelation didn't frighten me; it was just weird and easily set aside.

Ignoring Revelation all those years was my loss. I wish I could get the years back. Over the past fifteen years, I've come to see the power and the beauty of Revelation, and even more importantly, the message of hope and encouragement in its pages. Scholars such as Bruce Metzger, Christopher Rowland, David Aune, Craig Hill, N. T. Wright, and Craig Koester<sup>1</sup> have opened up the book for me.

The beginning

The book of Revelation begins simply enough. It is a "revelation" given to Jesus by God. In turn, Jesus has entrusted it to an angel who has revealed it to John, the one who wrote down what he experienced in a series of visions. (Perhaps it isn't really so simple, after all.)

A "revelation"<sup>2</sup> in the sense that the word is used here is an "unveiling," a pulling back of the curtains so that we can see the truth about the world, about God, and about what is to come.

We all lead "real world" lives filled with families and jobs and governments and politicians and wars. It has always been this way. An apocalypse, like the New Testament book of Revelation, strives to show us the cosmic struggles which, though unseen, are very real indeed.

The early Christians struggled with the Revelation of John for some time, but, in the end, settled on it being a piece of writing every bit as sacred and inspired as any of the four gospels. These Christians, collectively called the Church, embraced John's stark visions as a word from God, a word to be heard and to be heeded.

A vision of Christ

The opening verses of Revelation tell us that these visions are prophetic and that we are to hear and keep them, implying that these are words we are to understand. How can we "keep what is written" if what is written makes no sense? Thus, the book itself often interprets for us the meaning of the most important symbolism.

<sup>1</sup>If someone asks me for a book on Revelation, I usually urge them to pick up a copy of Craig Koester's, Revelation and the End of All Things. More than any other, this book has helped me to grasp the narrative of Revelation and understand better the symbolism. It is very suitable for laypeople and received excellent reviews from biblical scholars. N. T. Wright also has published his helpful, Revelation for Everyone.

<sup>2</sup>In the Greek, the word is apokalypsis, from which we get our word, "apocalypse." It simply means "unveiling" or "revelation." This type of writing is called "apocalyptic" based on both its message and its style.

John<sup>3</sup> has been banished to the island of Patmos, where he has visions. These begin with his opening vision of Christ. What he sees transcends the power of words to express directly, thus, much like the prophet Ezekiel, his descriptions center on comparisons; i.e., Jesus' voice is "like the sound of many waters." The vision draws heavily on the Son of Man imagery of Daniel 7, in which God, the Ancient One, gives the Son of Man dominion over creation. Jesus stands amid seven golden lampstands which, we are told by the book itself, represent seven churches. He holds seven stars in his hand, which we are again told in the book, represent the angels of each of the seven churches.

And the sword in Jesus' mouth? It's an image that we find only in Revelation where the metaphor occurs four times, culminating in Jesus' victory on the battlefield (Revelation 19). The sword is probably a metaphor for the tongue, with its sharpness conveying the power of Christ's words. What Jesus speaks is the truth.<sup>4</sup> And he is about to tell it to the churches.

Being Jesus' Church

There are seven letters to seven churches. All are actual Christian communities in western Asia minor. Each of the seven Christian communities (Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamum, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea) gets a different message from Jesus. A good exercise is to read each one and ask yourself which letter would be written to your own church. The specifics of the letters aren't always easy to understand, but the thrust of each is clear. The Christians in Smyrna are encouraged in their suffering and poverty. They are rich in what matters. The Philadelphians are encouraged in their patient endurance. Jesus' words to these churches, when laid against the warnings given to the wealthy Laodiceans, reminds us that for 2,000 years, the way of Christ has been marked by suffering, not prosperity.

The helicopter view of Revelation

Revelation is easier to understand if we grasp the big picture, what a professor of mine liked calling the "helicopter view." Broadly speaking, the book has three sections:

Chapters 1-3 consist of John's opening vision of Christ, and Jesus' letters to seven churches in western Asia Minor (modern-day Turkey).

Chapters 4-11 focus on God, Christ, and a world that chooses to trust itself rather than its creator. In chapter 11, the unbelieving come to faith and the heavens ring out with the worship of God. In some ways, the book could end right there, but John's visions retell this story beginning in chapter 12.

Chapters 12-22 are not a continuation of the story, but a second telling of the cosmic conflict between the creator and his idolatrous creation. This time the story focuses on Satan and a world in thrall to the powers that oppose God. This story culminates in God's victory through Jesus Christ, the judgment of all people, and the arrival of the long-awaited new heavens and earth. This is the completed restoration of the cosmos and of humanity's relationship with God.

<sup>3</sup>Though the early church held that this John was also the writer of the gospel and the NT letters bearing the name of John, this is almost certainly another John. Based on clues in the book, this John was probably Jewish and a native of Palestine who emigrated to Asia Minor. David Aune speculates that John's knowledge of the seven Christian communities shows he was an itinerant Christian prophet in western Asia Minor. Most scholars hold that the book was written late in the first century, toward the end of the Roman emperor Domitian's reign (81-96AD).

<sup>4</sup>Though commentators do not seem to make much of it, every time I come to this passage, I think of Hebrews 4:12-13: "12Indeed, the word of God is living and active, sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing until it divides soul from spirit, joints from marrow; it is able to judge the thoughts and intentions of the heart. 13And before him no creature is hidden, but all are naked and laid bare to the eyes of the one to whom we must render an account." To my mind, this is another of those echoes of Scripture that God hopes we'll hear.

The letter to Philadelphia, which means “brotherly love,” is the sort of letter any Christian community would hope to receive, as opposed to the letter to the community in Laodicea, which we’ll examine in another lesson.

The Philadelphians have kept Jesus’ word, i.e, they’ve been obedient to Jesus’ teachings. They have also not denied Jesus’ name; refusing, I suppose, to recant their faith in the face of persecution. They are patiently enduring the trials that have been set before them. They are being Jesus’ church, faithful and obedient. It is that simple and that profound. Let’s pray that the same would be true of us. Obedient and faithful. This is what it means to be Jesus’ church.

Apocalyptic Literature

In Greek, the word “apocalypse” means “unveiling” and it is often used to describe an entire genre of writing that was very popular in the 200 years before and the 200 years after Jesus. Authors used apocalyptic writing to describe momentous and cosmic events, often having to do with the end of the world. Apocalyptic writing was stuffed full of symbols and filled with all sorts of wild imagery. These writings report mysterious revelations and usually entailed a cosmic transformation of the heavens and the earth, as well as a judgment of the dead. This literature seems very odd to us because we rarely read anything like it, but it was not odd in Jesus’ day. In the Bible, the second half of the book of Daniel is another example of apocalyptic writing.

Like all apocalyptic writings, the book of Revelation is filled with many sorts of symbols. There are colors, numbers, animals, lamp stands, buildings, plants, and so on. Some are very easy to understand, some are more obscure, and the meanings of some are probably lost to us forever. It is important to realize that the symbols in apocalyptic literature weren’t meant to conceal, but to reveal and to invest the writings with their cosmic significance. For example, in chapter 17, John is shown the Whore of Babylon who drinks the blood of the saints. We might wonder who the Whore is, but the answer is provided in verse 9, where we are told that the woman is seated on seven mountains. Anyone in the ancient world would hear this as a very thinly veiled reference to the Seven Hills of Rome, for it was Rome who persecuted the Christians. Another prominent symbol is the number seven, which signifies completeness or totality. The seven heads of the dragon indicate Satan’s total opposition to God (Rev 12:3); the seven spirits of the Lamb signify the fullness of the Holy Spirit going out with total power (seven horns) and full knowledge and insight (seven eyes). In the book of Revelation there are even seven beatitudes! All these symbols seem strange to us, but they were not strange to readers of ancient apocalyptic literature, in which seven always symbolized completeness.

As Christians, we believe that Jesus’ death and resurrection was the most important event in human history, inaugurating God’s new world – a world reborn. Easter was a thunderous moment – a moment when the ages met. Every Easter we celebrate God’s victory over evil, sin, and death. We celebrate new creation and life beyond the grave!

Could any words really begin to describe such events? Because our everyday language would be woefully inadequate to the task, John uses enormously provocative and fantastical word-pictures to convey the enormity of these cosmic events. He writes to encourage persecuted Christians, to show them, as powerfully as he can, that the Christian story will end well, that their own story will end well, even though the abominations of Rome make this claim seem absurd. He reminds them of the cosmic powers they battle, a battle climaxing in Jesus’ victory (Chapter 19 & 20) and inaugurating the final re-creation of “a new heaven and a new earth” (21:1) where “anyone who wishes [can] take the water of life as a gift” (22:17).

Questions for Reflection

1. What pre-conceived notions about Revelation do you bring to this series?

2. Have you ever tried to find a message in this book for your life now? If so, what did you learn?
3. The vision of Christ in the first chapter is striking. It is meant to inspire awe and perhaps even a little terror. How does it fit with the portraits of Jesus that emerge from the gospels or from Paul? What is your personal, even emotional, reaction to John's vision of Jesus? Can you think of any other NT passages that evoke a cosmic Christ? (Hint – read Colossians 1:15-22. Others?)
4. Obedient and faithful: The church in Philadelphia is commended by Jesus for living this out. How well do you think we heed Jesus' call to lives of obedience and faithfulness?
