Isaiah 9:7 (NIV)

⁷Of the greatness of his government and peace there will be no end.
He will reign on David's throne and over his kingdom, establishing and upholding it with justice and righteousness from that time on and forever.
The zeal of the Lord Almighty will accomplish this.

Jeremiah 23:1–4 (NIV)

“Woe to the shepherds who are destroying and scattering the sheep of my pasture!” declares the LORD. ²Therefore this is what the LORD, the God of Israel, says to the shepherds who tend my people: “Because you have scattered my flock and driven them away and have not bestowed care on them, I will bestow punishment on you for the evil you have done,” declares the LORD. ³“I myself will gather the remnant of my flock out of all the countries where I have driven them and will bring them back to their pasture, where they will be fruitful and increase in number. ⁴I will place shepherds over them who will tend them, and they will no longer be afraid or terrified, nor will any be missing,” declares the LORD.

Luke 1:32–33 (NIV)

³²He will be great and will be called the Son of the Most High. The Lord God will give him the throne of his father David, ³³and he will reign over Jacob's descendants forever; his kingdom will never end.”

John 10:14–18 (NIV)

¹⁴“I am the good shepherd; I know my sheep and my sheep know me—
¹⁵just as the Father knows me and I know the Father—and I lay down my life for the sheep. ¹⁶I have other sheep that are not of this sheep pen. I must bring them also. They too will listen to my voice, and there shall be one flock and one shepherd. ¹⁷The reason my Father loves me is that I lay down my life—only to take it up again. ¹⁸No one takes it from me, but I lay it down of my own accord.
I have authority to lay it down and authority to take it up again. This command
I received from my Father.”

John 12:12–15 (NIV)

¹²The next day the great crowd that had come for the festival heard that Jesus was on his way to Jerusalem. ¹³They took palm branches and went out to meet him, shouting,
“Hosanna!”
“Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord!”
“Blessed is the king of Israel!”

¹⁴Jesus found a young donkey and sat on it, as it is written:

¹⁵“Do not be afraid, Daughter Zion;
see, your king is coming,
seated on a donkey's colt.”

As we approach Thanksgiving, we need to remember to be thankful that Jesus Christ is our king. There are no rivals.

How much experience do any of us have with kings? We are Americans and our founders wisely rejected the rule of a king long ago. More than three thousand years ago, the prophet Samuel urged his fellow Israelites to do the same – or, better said, to continue embracing God as their king (1 Samuel 8). But the Israelites thought they knew better; they wanted a king, just like all their neighbors. So they got one . . . and it did not go well.

The kings of the ancient world were not like the kings and queens of today, who are largely figureheads, stripped of any real power. In the ancient world and up to the time of the Magna Carta, the kings, as well as the occasional queen, were absolute monarchs. Some exercised their total sovereignty with the good of the people in mind. Most used the power to satisfy their personal desires. But in nearly all cases, their rule was absolute. This is why assassination was such a popular way of dealing with an errant king, such as the Israelite King Amon of Judah (641-639 BC). He lasted only two years on the throne.

Throughout the ancient Near East, including Israel, the shepherd was a metaphor for the kings and their responsibilities to guide, protect, and care for their people. Jeremiah 23 (see above), like Ezekiel 34, opens with God’s indictment of Israel’s shepherds, i.e., their kings.

But the prophets of Israel promise that God will raise up proper shepherds,

Christ the King Sunday

The Christian calendar begins with the first Sunday of Advent (next week) and ends with Christ the King Sunday, which is this weekend. It is a special day that was instituted by Pope Pius XI in 1925. The Second Vatican Council set it on the last Sunday of the church calendar in 1969. It is a day that is now on the church calendar of many Protestant denominations. The day is an opportunity to celebrate the kingship and kingdom of Christ before we begin Advent, which prepares us to celebrate the birth of Christ.

culminating in “a righteous branch.” This shepherding king will be, as Eugene Peterson paraphrases it, “A ruler who knows how to rule justly. He’ll make sure of justice and keep people united. In his time Judah will be secure again and Israel will live in safety” (Jeremiah 23:5-6).

Though the imagery of a shepherd king was wrapped around David, he had been dead for centuries by the time of Jeremiah and Ezekiel. The prophets pointed ahead to a day when God would raise up a shepherd king from the house of David who would usher in God’s reign. In other words, a messiah.¹ Thus, the true Shepherd King, the King of all kings, the Lord of all lords, is, of course, Jesus. And there is even more to the Bible’s presentation of King Jesus.

God, the Good Shepherd

The imagery of God as the good shepherd and we as his flock is one of the dominant portraits of God in the Bible. It is not a very complicated or intellectual portrait. God cares – that’s it. He cares for his flock and for each sheep in it. Even in a flock of a hundred sheep, the good shepherd will search high and low for the one who is lost (Matt 18:10-14). God finds for us the green pastures and the still waters.

¹ Kings were anointed. Thus, the king was the “anointed one,” or mashiah in Hebrew, which is brought into English as “messiah.” Mashiah was taken into Greek as christos, becoming “Christ” in English. Thus, every time we refer to Jesus as Christ, we are essentially calling him King Jesus.

The fact that we need a shepherd seems to be a lot harder for us to learn than it is for the sheep. We cherish our supposed independence, whereas the sheep are perfectly content being wholly dependent on the shepherd. In fact, sheep need the shepherd's caring and protection in a way that other herd animals do not, for sheep have lost the ability to defend themselves. They are an easy meal for the wolves.

We think we don't need a shepherd when, in truth, we do. We can't accumulate enough wealth to forestall sorrow. There is no doctor who can prevent our death. We can't have enough police to stop crime or armies to prevent war. We imagine that the wolf is our problem to fix, when it actually the shepherd's. God knows better than we do that a good shepherd is exactly what we need.

And God is this good shepherd . . . and Jesus is the Shepherd King of Jeremiah 23 . . . and God was always to be Israel's true king . . . and Jesus is not only human, but God himself . . . and on and on . . . until we come to grasp that in Jesus, God is returning to claim his throne.

Who is Jesus?

"Who is Jesus?" It was the question on a Sunday in Jerusalem 2,000 years ago and it is the question for our world still. The palm-waving crowds rightly expect that Jesus is God's Messiah, his anointed one. In John's brief telling of Jesus' welcoming, the crowds shout "Hosanna," which means "save us" in Hebrew. They sing out "Blessed is the one who comes in the name of the Lord – the king of Israel." This is from Psalm 118, a song of God's victory, the day when God has finally acted. But the crowds wrongly expect that Jesus is to be a warrior King, that the anticipated violent confrontation with Rome has come to a head.

But John helps us to see that things are not as the crowds expect. The crowds thought they knew Jesus, but they did not (John 1:10). John's quote about the donkey is taken from Zechariah 9:9. This is a passage about the coming ruler of God's people – very messianic in other words. But John changes the opening words of the quotation from "Rejoice greatly, daughter of Zion" to "Do not be afraid, daughter of Zion." Here, John draws on Zephaniah 3.² The fuller quote from Zephaniah 3:14-15 (I've underlined a key phrase) will make clearer what John is trying to accomplish with the change:

¹⁴ Sing aloud, O daughter Zion;
shout, O Israel!

Rejoice and exult with all your heart,
O daughter Jerusalem!

¹⁵ The Lord has taken away the judgments against you,
he has turned away your enemies.

The king of Israel, the Lord, is in your midst;
you shall fear disaster no more.

It is not just the Messiah whom the crowds welcome into the city, it is God himself. Centuries before, Ezekiel had brought to the people terrifying visions of ²I am continually struck by how carefully constructed are the Gospels and the other New Testament writings. John, like the other writers, skillfully pulls together Scriptural quotations and allusions to make his points. We might wonder whether any of his readers could comprehend John's careful use of the Old Testament, but that is only because our own knowledge of Scripture is so inadequate. We miss things that would be plainly evident to John's first readers.

God's departure from the temple in Jerusalem before its burning by the Babylonians. In the centuries since, despite the rebuilding of the temple, there wasn't really any sign that God had returned.³ The Jews still awaited the fulfillment of God's promise: "See, I am sending a messenger to prepare the way before me, and the Lord whom you seek will suddenly come to his temple" (Malachi 3:1). What must the crowds of followers have thought when, on Monday, Jesus didn't head for the Antonia Fortress to confront the Romans but to the temple, where he would invoke the words of Jeremiah pronouncing judgment on the people and their temple. A couple of decades later, long before the writing of any of the Gospels, Paul would describe the body of Christ as God's temple, as well as each individual believer (see 1 Corinthians 3:16-17 & 6:19-20).

When the Romans hung the sign reading "King of the Jews" on the cross above Jesus, they meant it as mockery but it carried truth that probably escaped even the Jews, for they expected a human king like their idealized King David. But earlier in Israel's history, they did not have a human king. Their king was God!

The early Christians came to understand that their proclamations of Jesus as Messiah and God brought back together what had been separated. Jesus was King, Lord, and Savior. In the beginning, he was with God and was God (John 1:1). And, now, he was installed as the King of Kings, Lord of all that is, victor over the forces of sin and death (Rev. 19).

A life of thanksgiving

Even as we celebrate Christ the King, we celebrate a very American holiday, Thanksgiving. The holiday of Thanksgiving is a great time to embrace anew the thankful hearts that ought to characterize us all year. In his book, Prayer: finding the heart's true home, Richard Foster writes, "Jesus was the ultimate grateful person. The signature written across his heart was the prayer 'I thank you, Father, Lord of heaven and earth'" (Matthew 11:25). Jesus was of one heart and mind with the psalmist who wrote "I will give thanks to the Lord with my whole heart" (Psalm 9:1) and with Paul who wrote "I thank God for all of you, because your faith is proclaimed throughout the world" (Romans 1:8) and with the writer of Hebrews, "let us continually offer a sacrifice of praise to God, that is, the fruit of lips that confess his name" (13:15).

As in all things, we are called to be Christ-like. We must allow ourselves to be drawn more often into the praise of God and the joyful giving of thanks to him. Foster reminds us of Augustine's phrase, "God thirsts to be thirsted after" and writes "Our God is not made of stone . . . Like the proud mother who is thrilled to receive a wilted bouquet of dandelions from her child, so God celebrates our feeble expressions of gratitude."

Let's not pretend that even feeble expressions of thanks are easy. Living every day in a spirit of thanksgiving does not come naturally to us; there is much in life that wants to crowd out any sense of gratitude. Nonetheless, as we come again to the glories of Advent and Christmas, we can remind ourselves to be a ³The Jews believed that their exile to Babylon (their trip to jail) had been punishment for their sin. Though they had returned to the land they were certainly still in jail, with the Romans being the latest in a long line of jailers. They would not be released from jail until their sins had been forgiven – and the coming of the Day of the Lord, to be ushered in by God's Messiah, would entail such forgiveness and, hence, the restoration of Israel.

grateful community, seeking ever to grow in our ability to see and to experience God in all his goodness.

Scott Engle's Bible Classes

Monday Afternoon Class

Beginning this week: The Gospel of Luke.

Meeting on-line at 3pm Monday on Scott's Facebook page. Search for "Scott Engle - St. Andrew UMC."

Tuesday Lunchtime Class

Current study: Acts

Meeting at 12:00 noon Tuesday in person in Piro Hall and on-line on Scott's Facebook ministry page. Search for "Scott Engle - St. Andrew UMC".

About the weekday classes:

Join us whenever you can. Each week's lesson stands on its own. This is very "drop-in." Both classes are recorded and are available each week in my podcast at scottengle.podbean.com. They are also available on Apple podcasts and elsewhere. Search by "Scott Engle Bible Studies".

Scott's Sunday Class

This week: Week 5 -- The Atheist Delusion: Science, the Bible, and the Truth in Which We Live.

Meeting on Sunday at 11:00 in Smith Worship Center and on Scott's Facebook page. Search for "Scott Engle - St. Andrew UMC."

Videos of all three classes are posted on Scott's YouTube channel. Search for "Scott Engle." These videos are posted as soon as possible after class.
